Faculty/alum music project explores social media etiquette

25 Feb 2016

by Natalie Johnson

Take some fixed electronic sounds created by University of Wisconsin Oshkosh alumnus Christopher Jette '99. Add live singing by alumnus and UW O assistant voice professor Nathan Krueger '88, a baritone. Mix in some visual art.

The result: A performance to captivate the senses.

The UW O duo presented cmetq (Communication Etiquette), which examines the etiquette of communication technology during two time periods, for the first time Saturday at the Arts and Communication Center's Music Hall. A third collaborator, Alejandro Casazi, of British Columbia, contributed the visual art.

The unique performance— set in the dawn of the telephone age and the adolescence of social media—combined soliloquies and Tweet-length texts.

Watch the video to experience cmetq.

Jette returned to campus for the performance, funded by the Oshkosh Collegiate Composers. As an undergrad, he studied violin performance at UW O.

"It is wonderful to be back on campus after 20 years," he said. "My education at UW Oshkosh set me up for everything I never knew I would do."

Jette earned a master's of music degree from the New England Conservatory and a doctorate in composition from the University of California Santa Barbara. This academic year, he is serving as the Interdisciplinary Performance Grant Wood Fellow and a visiting assistant music professor at the University of Iowa.
